

From: Pete
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/17/01 2:44am
Subject: Sellout

This is the worst possible outcome to this case that you could possibly figured out.

I wrote on CNN, YEARS ago that if microsoft was allowed to do that to Netscape then everyone's software would soon be assimilated into the Microsoft collective.

Here we are YEARS later and this has become the system of microsoft "innovation"

Example: You guys are fighting over desktop icons and microsoft moves there entire platform to the Startup button in XP. Then says ya you can do anything with desktop icons like they're giving you something.

You taking so long to get this sorted out Microsoft wins by loosing. While you guys keep wasting time Microsoft has tried to "innovate" the entire web.

Then you let them go....

Shame Shame.....

In ten more years we'll all look back at all of this and realize just how big of a mistake you guys just made....

There is nothing in this agreement that is going to stop microsoft's behavior. They will just innovate around the agreement, You watch and see...

G Conner